tioned decree we will sell by public aucition, on the premises, on

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 1894.

beginning at 12 o'clock M., the LARGE, WELL-KNOWN, AND VERY VALUABLE FLOUR-MILLS above referred to, sometimes known as the "HAXALL-CRENSHAW MILLS," with the unusually valuable water-rower of about 700 horse-power, and other appartenances and privileges belonging thereto.

The mills are capable of turning out daily 1,500 barrels of flour and 1,200 bushels of corn-meal, and are equipped with much of the latest and most approved machinery. The immense water-power, capable of being greatly increased by proper utilization; the large areas of adjacent vacant lands, and the giret capacity of the buildings, there being over 125,009 feet of floor-room, will permit, indeed invites the establishment of other industries or an extension of the present plant. The brands have an amost world-wide reputation and possess great value.

The never-failing and abundant supply of water which furnishes power is drawn from the river by a private canal, easily and cheaply maintained, and the isolation of the mills minimizes the danger of fire.

These mills, with so many valuable appurtenances, and situated in a city so favored in climate, health, and unrivalled shipping facilities by water and rail, and offering such vast possibilities of extension, should attract the attention of manufacturers and capitalists.

The VACANT LOTS may be sold with the Mills or separately, as may seem best at the time of sale.

TERMS: One fourth cash, and the restitute to be retained until all the purchaser to keep the buildings, machinery, and fixtures adequately insured as further security for the purchase money, and the title to be retained until all the purchaser to keep the buildings, machinery, and fixtures adequately insured as further security for the year 184; but the purchase money is paid and a conveyance ordered by the court. RICHMOND AND DANVILLE RAILROAD CO., (Samuel Speacer, F. W. Heidekoper, and Reuben Fo tar, Receivers).

Frailer Department, RICHMOND, Va., June 23, 1894.

By direction of the claim agent of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, I will sell at public auction, in accordance with law, for cash, at the Virginia-Street warehouse of the said company, in the city of Richmond, Va., beginning at 10 o'clock A. M., on By virtue of two certain deeds of trust, ere cuted to the undersigned trustee, both date December 16, 1893, and of record in the Clerk and on pages 160 and 161, and being requestee so to do by the beneficiaries in said deeds. I shall proceed to soil at public ancion, upon the premises, on at 6 o'clock P. M., the above PROPERTY, which is described in the deed as follows—via: All that land lying and being in Hearice county, va., fronting on a cross-road teading from the inemittage road to the Broad-Surest road about 430 yards, and running back within parallel innes to the lands of Major Lewis Ginter.

The improvements consist of large stables, barns, and necessary out-buildings. Also, a small and comfortable frame dwelling. The piace has been arranged and nitted out at son-siderable cost for the purpose of rusing ast training theroughbred borses, with ascellent race-track, fine grazing lots, well anchosed, and many other advantages for conducting such a business. The location is one of the best around the city, as the surrounding improvements that are being made by Major Giner are more extensive and substantial than can be found in any portions of our subarbs, with handsome macadamized avenues, boulevards, &a. As a speculation the sale of this property offers a most excellent opportunity, for in view of the handsome surroundings and the beautiful surface of the land, it cannot be many years before this tract will be subdivised and sold off in vitace of the land, it cannot be many years before this tract will be subdivised and sold off in vitace it as a large increase in value on the price it can now be purchased for.

TERMS: Ey consent of all parties, one fourth cash; bulance at six, twelve, and eighteen months for negotiable notes bearing deper cent. interest from day of sale, and secured by a trust deed on the property, or more liberal terms may be given if desired.

caides, the people in this neighborhood levery recently been taught a lesson in this line. A negro was sent to charged with an attempt to assault white married woman. A few nights erwards a mob come down to the art-house to take his life. They called the Sheriff, and, as luck would have he knew them all, and, calling them their names, told them to go back their homes and let the law take its time. He threatened to give their names the court if they made any disturbance.

They discovered that the Sheriff knew his business too well to be fooled with, and they quietly returned to their homes. The negro was tried twice, and a new trial granted him each time; the third time he was acquitted. The Alchie people remembered this, and, of course, did not feel inclined to take the law into their HOUSE-WARMING.

JUMPED TO DEATH. FATAL PLUNCE FROM THE HIGHEST POINT ON BROOKLYN BRIDGE He Fell Twirling Over and Over to the Water 135 Feet Below-Body Not Found.

(New York Herald.) an jumped from the Brooklyn bridge into the East river on Friday, but whether he was a senseless seeker for have been, or was simply intent upon ending his life, may never be known, fo he sank from sight in the waters of the river, and it is improbable that his body will ever be found and identified.

Three men were near him when he made the fatal plunge, but none of them knew him, and the few articles of clothing that he left behind furnish no clew to his identity. It was a few minutes after 12 o'clock that Ernest Knaussman, a truckman, of No. 185 Twenty-second street, Brooklyn, drove on the bridge at the New York entrance. Three men jumped upon his truck to ride over to Brooklyn, and as two of them were friends of Knaussman, he made no remonstrance. The two whom he knew were neighbors of his, George W. McDermott, of 205 Thirty-second street, Brooklyn, and Thomas Kavanagh, of 290 Twentieth street.

The third man was a stranger to all of them, and they paid little attention to him, as it is not unusual for men to take such lifts across the bridge. They take such lifts across the bridge. They saw that he was a young man, about 20 years old, of medium height, and stout build. His face was smooth shaven, and he wore eye-glasses.

The weather was warm, and the stranger divested himself of his coat, throwing it on the bottom of the truck, with the remark that he "guessed he better off without it." JUMPED FROM THE HIGHEST POINT He showed no desire to enter into con-versation with the others on the truck and his further actions were unnoticed until the truck had reached the central point of the bridge, where the roadway is point of the bridge, where the roadway is highest above the river.

Here the man's hat either blew off or he threw it off, and when he jumped down to the roadway to get it Knaussman continued to drive on.

When Knaussman looked back again he saw something that made him bring his horses to a sudden halt. The stranger had climbed up to the top of the railing along the roadway overlooking the river, and with a single wave of his hands to those who had just been his companions, he plunged downward.

to those who had just been his companions, he plunged downward.
His effort was to go head foremost, but in the part of a second his body was twirling over and over, and when he struck the water, 125 feet below, he was flat upon his breast and stomach. FLOATED FOR A FEW MOMENTS.

That much the men on the truck saw, and then they cried to Policeman John J. Smith, who was on the opposite roadway helping to patch up a broken down wagon. Smith hurried across to the point from which the man had jumped, and when he looked down he saw the stranger's body, which had come to the surface. From the way it floated it looked as if the man's neck had been broken. It was visible for only a few moments and then a Glen Island steamboat and railroad float and tug passed over it.

Policeman Smith telephoned to the Bridge police-station, in Washington street, Brooklyn, and the sergeant in charge dispatched a squad of men to the river front to find the man, if possible. But he was far beyond the fear of arrest or the hope of succor.

The suicide's coat and hat were taken to the police station. The coat had been of good material, but was badly solled and frayed about the edges. In the pockness was found a paper of thoacce, a box FLOATED FOR A FEW MOMENTS.

of good material, but was bank and frayed about the edges. In the pockets were found a paper of tobacco, a box of matches, a worn-out necktie, and a few other articles, none of which furnish would in any way, as few other articles, none of which furnished anything that would in any way, assist in establishing the suicide's identity. The hat was black, soft felt, and was in much better condition than the coat. According to the men who were with him on the truck, the man had worn trousers of a light material.

The police believe that the man was a tramp who had tired of living, and had made certain of killing himself either by the fall or by drowning. He succeeded beyond peradventure of a doubt.

THE FIFTEENTH JUMPER. GOT OTHERS OUT AND IN HIMSELF.

This is the fifteenth man that has made the plunge from the Brooklyn Bridge. Some of the others were: Robert Emmett Odlum, professor of swimming, of Washington, D. C. He jumped on February 24, 1886, and was in-1836, and escaped without injury. Ev

"Larry" Donovan, a printing-press feeder, jumped on December 23, 1886, and was picked up all right. He was killed later by jumping from a bridge in Englater by jumping from a bridge in England.

A half-crazed German named Koch attempted to kill himself by making the plunge in 1888, but was fished out alive.

Joseph Burns, of Staten Island, also tried to commit suicide by jumping in 1888, but was picked up, and served six months in the penitentiary for it.

Francis McCarry jumped on November 23, 1888. His body was never recovered.

There were three jumpers about a year ago, John J. Mulrenin jumped off on June 18th, and landed on the roof of one of the stores in Front street. He is buried in Potter's Fleld. The next day John G. Haggerty jumped, and simply got wet. Two weeks later Thomas McCarthy, a Brooklyn bartender, leaped from the
